The photos show Bernard Kelly with his daughter Kathleen on the verandah at 22 Eglinton Road and his wife Mary Ann Kelly.

They also shared the house with Mary Ann's brothers Alick and Francis Shumack. Francis Shumack is listed on electoral rolls in 1936-38 and Alick Shumack in 1936-54, both as labourers.

Redfern also with having assaulted a constable... Constable Gilbert stated that on May 21 he was trying to arrest a man when Alick Shumack used bad language, and rushed at him, striking him in the face with his clenched fist. The men pushed him into a lane and then pulled him into the back yard of Shumack's house. There Shumack broke away from custody, and threw a billet of wood. He ducked, and the wood passed over his head. Then Shumack picked up an axe and rushed at him. After a struggle he managed to take the axe from him, and threw it down the yard. Shumack then ran into the house. He went up to the doorway of the back room to arrest Shumack, intending to handcuff his prisoners together. Shumack met him by throwing two large ornaments at him... Shumack then got a knife from the kitchen, and rushed at him with it, but his sister caught hold of him, and he took the knife from him. ... Witness seized him and brought him into the yard, but just at that moment Shumack's brother Forbes appeared on the scene, and pulled out a pocket knife. Forbes Shumack said to his brother Alick, "Put the boot into him, and I will help you." When he got his two prisoners into the street, Forbes Shumack picked up two large stones and gave them to his brother Alick, who hit witness with them ... Alick Shumack was sentenced to four months' imprisonment, and his brother Forbes was fined £2 (SMH 27 May 1908).

The Kellys had three children, Ann Dorothy, Michael Bernard and Lynne Eunice Kelly, who grew up in Eglinton Road. The photo below shows Alexander Kelly with his son Michael and daughter Lynne in the backyard of Eglinton Road.

Michael Kelly, interviewed by Jeannette Knox in 2011, recalled there were many children in Eglinton Road when he grew up. Families felt safe and often left both front and back doors open. There was always plenty of fun to be made at home and billy-carts were popular. There was a strong sense of community and sharing and old people were respected. On Christmas Day children in Eglinton Road used to show each other the toys they had received.

Jubilee Park was a favourite place to play, preferred by their parents over the back lanes. The park was well-used, especially at weekends and everyone knew each other. In summer, there was cricket in the Park and they would sit in the grandstand and watch players like Richie Benaud and Alan Simpson, who would talk to them. Bands used to play in the Rotunda.

The photo taken in the late 1950s shows Michael, Lynne and Ann Kelly outside 22 Eglinton Road. All three children attended St James Primary School in Forest Lodge where the nuns taught the boys football. Anne and Lynn then went to St Scholastica's in Glebe and Michael to St Brendan's.

Most boys in Eglinton Road had after-school jobs and always gave the money they earned to their mothers.

Michael Kelly used to work at the markets, with a 3 am start and in the holidays worked in Tony Peruch's delicatessen in Glebe Point Road.

Many of the women in Eglinton Road worked at Max Factors or in Stern's factory, which was previously on the same site at 431 Glebe Point Road.

Michael recalled the tram terminus was outside the Max Factor factory in Glebe Point Road. People dressed up to "go to town". The picture theatre was the Astor and he recalls that in 1960 "two bob" would cover the fare, a drink, the ticket and chips for going home. Church attendance was high and there were six masses on Sundays at St James. Michael served as altar boy at the 6 am mass.

Alexander James Kelly died at home on 23 December 1960, aged 51. His wife Joyce purchased the house in 1961 for £10,000 with a war service loan. She worked at several jobs, including at the timber yards and at Royston Boys Home in Glebe Point Road to support her family.

Joyce also took in boarders. A cousin, Margaret Jean Chapman, a nurse, is listed on the electoral rolls in 1955-58. She took up a position nursing in Lightning Ridge.

Her father, Wilfred Ernest Collison (pictured with his second wife Josie), came to live in Eglinton Road after his divorce and shared a room with his grandson Michael. Wilfred had served in the RAAF in the war. Three of the four children of his second marriage died as infants. Wilfred died in 1969.

Joyce's daughter, Ann Dorothy Kelly, died in a car accident on 19 February 1968, aged 19.

The 1970 electoral rolls for 22 Eglinton Road list Edna Joyce Rout, home duties, her son Michael Bernard Kelly, clerk, daughter Lynne Eunice Kelly, nurse and Albert Edward Rout, 54.

Albert Edward Rout, 54, was an engineer and a captain in the maintenance section of the broadcast section of the army in 1944-48. He was a widower and moved in as a boarder. He married Joyce Edna Kelly in 1972, not long before he died. Joyce continued to live in Eglinton Road until 1998 until she moved to a retirement home in Leichhardt. She died in 2001.

Rental property 1998-2001

22 Eglinton Road was sold in 1998 to John Norman Walton and D Walton, who rented it out. It was rented for some years to Andrew and Caroline. The house was sold in December 2010.
